By mid-afternoon Tuesday, Election Day 1992, polling officials in other local towns were also reporting what looked to be record voter turnouts.

The Citizen goes to press too early to report the results of Tuesday's election, but the Wednesday edition of our daily affiliate, the Lewiston Sun-Journal, will have all the latest local and national results.

For the first time in three years, the Telstar field hockey team will not play in the State Class C

Championship game.
The three-time defending Western Maine Class C Champions lost 1-0 in Wednesday's semi-final playoff against Yarmouth.

The Rebels have also lost by 1-0 scores in the state championship game for the past three years.

This year's young team continued the tradition of strong Telstar hockey by placing fourth in Western Maine, but inexperience finally caught up with the Rebels when they faced top-seeded Yarmouth last Yarmouth scored late in the first half when Telstar goal tender Danielle Bernier came about 10 feet out of the cage to meet a charging Clipper. Bernier turned back the initial shot on goal, but the Clippers persisted and managed to get it past her to the open cage for the only goal of the game.

"It was sort of a ping-pong effect," said co-coach Gail Wight. "Dani saved the first shot, then it came back again and Amy Patten pushed it out, but it came back again.

Yarmouth passed well and drove the ball hard throughout Wednes-day's game, but the Rebels doggedly frustrated several Clipper scoring attempts, in the process turning back 19 shots on goal.

TURF BATTLES

The signs, like the politicians, were still battling it out earlier this week, as the long campaign season finally drew to a close. This spread of signs on neighboring Church Street lawns includes most of the major national and local candidates, except for Ross Perot (who claimed plenty of ground elsewhere) and the Bush-Quayle duo (whose signs were few and far between, even on traditional Republican turf, until the very last days of the battle). (Photo by Michael Daniels)

IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN--Sunday River Ski Resort opened for the 1992-93 ski season Sunday--the earliest opening in the history of the Newry resort. More than 200 earlybird skiers, including this airborne snowboarder, turned up to take advantage of the first day, according to Sunday River spokesman Skip King. With temperatures below normal throughout the final days of October, snowmakers had been able to lay down a base of 12 to 24 inches on the 1.2 mile long Right Stuff ski trail. Snowmakers also blanketed the Ecstasy and Sunday Punch ski trials, which opened Monday. The resort's snowmaking arsenal now includes over 700 snow guns permanently deployed on the mountain, ensuring that crews can take full advantage of temperatures without downtime due to the necessity of moving snow guns. King said that Sunday River hopes to open Jungle Road and Upper Punch by the weekend.

The best the district can hope for from the state for next year is level funding (the same amount as this year). But SAD 44 might not even receive that much--if the district's state evaluation rises (which reduces its state funding). Any losses will have to be made up for by increased local taxes or reduced expenditures.

District officials are already working on the preliminary FY '94 budget, Craig said, with administrators aiming at keeping SAD 44's budget at this year's level of about $6 million.

In order to do that, Craig said last week, some programs and personnel may be cut to keep up with increas-

ROBERT HASTINGS

To the Editor:

With the passing of Robert Hastings, we have lost one of this area's and Maine's best citizens. His beautiful farm, one of the state's most successful, and the fine family, he and his extraordinarily capable wife, Florence raised, will long bear testimonial to him.

I did not know him well until our mutual interests in the University of Maine and Gould Academy (especially when the change was taking place for Gould to no longer be Bethel's high school) led to many discussions.

Later in 1968, sharing ancestry with me in the Kimballs of East Bethel, he was of help to me, the Founder of the National Kimball Family Association. He participated in the first important round table discussion at our first reunion when we decided to become an Association. Over the subsequent years he attended several reunions. His lively presence and knowledge, and research, were of great help.

Also he showed much interest always in the Bethel Historical Society during our organization and, later, to the present.

I recall all our visits over these activities as very enthusiastic and productive. Then too, I remember the time we spent preparing the memorial, at which he gave the talk, for my cousin, Harry Mason, trustee emeritus of Gould, who died at the age of 103, and honored by Gould, in Sept. 1971. (Harry Mason had been the first member of the Kimball Family Association)

His wonderful sense of humor and ease at meeting people added to many gatherings, leaving an in-delible impression on all of us who knew him, and we will miss him greatly.

DON'T LET FEAR TRIUMPH

To the Editor:

In regard to a recent letter backing President Bush; I hope that by the time this letter is printed, Bill Clinton will be preparing to move into the White House so he can begin making the changes this country needs to carry us into the 21st

Newsweek are saying that the industrial stagnation caused by trickle down economics will take over 25 years to repair, possibly longer. Many Republicans do not want to see the economy going in the direction that it has been for the last few years, but they are afraid of the change that Bill Clinton represents. Fear in the face of change is natural. But if it causes one to make the wrong decision, fear in the face of a crisis can be devastating. This country cannot keep going the way it has been, ignoring the realities of the world economic situation, believing that all our trade partners will see the light and start playing fair.

Japan and Germany have been subsidizing their most critical industries since soon after World War Two, enabling them to cripple our steel, auto and now our high tech producers. Is this a good plan? It is for the Japanese and the Germans.

And what about Mr. Bush's Free Trade Agreement? Free for who? Was anyone besides Bill Clinton listening to Ross Perot's opinion of that agreement? Whatever Mr. Perot's failings as a politician (and that just proves he can't be all bad) no one can fault him as a businessman. He said that if this agreement is implemented the U.S. won't be making airplanes in 10 years. If you have any relatives that work for Boeing you better plan on your long distance phone bills going up. Is this a good plan? It is for the Mexicans and the Canadians.

Under President Bush my real taxes have gone up and as a small businessman my income has gone down. And now to top it off, his plan for universal health insurance places the burden on the already overstrapped businessman. That should work just great, now my employees not only won't have a health plan they won't have any employment either, because I won't be able to find work. It is almost impossible to find anyone out there with money to build now. Wait till I tell them they have to pay for my employee's health plan, too. Is this a good plan? It is for Aetna and Blue Cross.

Finally, we come to George Bush's ace in the hole, his foreign policy. The policy that built up two dictators so that we could send in American troops to get them out. A policy that fought a war in the Middle East to overthrow one of them A lot of Republican apologists, and then stopped our forces on the and God help me I was one of them, brink of doing it. BETHEL PLANNING BOARD

MEETINGS RESCHEDULED The Bethel Planning Board's November and December meetings have been rescheduled. There will be only one meeting each month, on Nov. 18 and Dec. 16. Both meetings will be held in the town office and will begin at 7 p.m.

From the Bethel Police log:

Police looking for pick-up driver who tried to pick up juvenile girl

A Bethel woman told police Thursday that a man had tried to talk her juvenile daughter into accepting a ride. The man was driving a medium-blue pickup truck and drove beside the girl as she walked to a bus stop, the police report said. The girl described the man as in his early 30s, with shoulder length brown hair and glasses. Police have a composite picture of the man and are asking anyone who may have any information about him to contact them.

Police are also investigating a break-in at the Bethel Lions Club, Lions member Larry Smith reported the burglary on Oct. 20. Burglars broke a cellar window to get into the Main Street hall. The police report did not say what was missing from the building.

Police also made three recent arrests. On Oct. 30, Harlan R. Blake, 22, of Bethel was arrest for operating a motor vehicle after license suspension. The same day Gary Goodrich, no age or residence given, was arrested on an outstanding warrant for failure to pay a fine. Halloween night Denzel Saucier-Rowe, 21, no address given was arrested for driving after license suspension. All three men were transported to Oxford County Jail after their arrest.

PEROTISTA REBELLION IN THE SCHOOLS--Mock elections in SAD 44 schools and the Agnes Gray School in West Paris followed the statewide pattern pretty closely, with the youngsters consistently indicating a preference for Independent Ross Perot over either incumbent Republican George Bush or his Democratic challenger Bill Clinton. Here, CPS fourth-grader Tia Edwards shakes hands with Bethel Town Manager Madeleine Hanley after casting her ballot in the school's mock election Monday at the Bethel Fire Station. Classmates Bobby Lynn McKenna and Chuckie Johnson wait to cast their ballots. Telstar High School's mock election were representative of the state and district voting, with Perot polling 86 votes to Clinton's 73 and Bush's 49 (in the 1988 mock election, Telstar students voted for George Bush by a margin of more than two-to-one). The rest of the election ballot at Telster went straight Republican. In the referendum balloting, the high schoolers OK'd bond issues for municipal recycling and water pollution control facilities, for repair of state facilities to meet OSHA requirements, and for tuitioning unemployed Mainers to the state's technical college system; but they turned down bonds for repairing port facilities and purchasing railroad lines. They also turned down a constitutional amendment dealing with interim manning of the offices of secretary and treasurer of state, and a second proposed amendment making it much more difficult for the state to impose unfunded mandates on local municipalities. But they overwhelmingly approved an amendment stipulating that fees raised by the Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife can only be used by that department.

THANKS FOR HISTORY HELP

To the Editor:

I have completed my last book of 20 years of researching different sections of Woodstock and wish to thank those, who have helped me: my daughter, Mary Cobb, who has assisted me at the Register of Deeds, for 10 years; Raymond Burnham, who built the attractive shelves at the Woodstock Museum, for my many books that I have given to the Historical Society, also for mounting my covered bridges for displaying; Kathleen Bean, who helped place the books and label the shelves; and Earl Noyes, who has patiently answered my many questions about the town.

On my shelves I have four books about Bryant Pond Village. There are scrapbooks, one especially interesting with weather predictions, remember when, tongue twisters, old remedies for every ill and much more. There are histories and genealogical information including a Bryant Genealogy written by Robert Curtis, Colchester. Vt.

Remembering Bob Hastings

By STANLEY HOWE

Although none of Bob Hastings' family and friends were shocked by his death this week, it is always an adjustment to make when a long anticipated event actually happens. Because Bob was always such an essential part of my childhood and has continued to be a force throughout my adult life, I have much to recall.

He was with me from the beginning. My mother was at what was then known as Central Maine General Hospital in Lewiston having me when Bob was taken there following a goring by a bull in his barnyard. His life was saved by the intervention of his old friend and neighbor Leslie Noyes, who arrived just in time to back the bull off.

Growing up beside the Hastings farm was always an experience. Irwin "Bub" Farrar was a remarkable East Bethel character, who developed nicknames for almost everyone in the community. His name for Bob was "Old Hoot and Holler" and how many times I recalled this when I heard Bob bellowing orders as he operated his farm.

We neighborhood children were always fascinated at how Bob would occasionally sit on the handle bars of a bicycle and ride backwards up the hill in front of our farm. None of us ever managed to perfect that stunt, and here was Bob performing it for all to see in his fifties and sixties. Visiting Bob and his wife Florence as children was often a remarkable time. I can recall visiting the kitchen once and seeing a bear sitting at the table. Bob had shot it up in back of the barn and brought it down and set it up at the table. One can only imagine how excited we children were to see a real bear, especially one seated so realistically. When I was a teenager I remember word arriving in East Bethel that Bob's famous first cousin in Canada, who had served with such distinction in the Canadian Cabinet for 22 years, had died. Bob and my grandmother took off for Montreal for the funeral. At the time Bob was suffering from an inflamed prostate, and he remarked to my grandmother that he thought he knew every restroom between Bethel and Montreal.

Bob was president of the East Bethel Cemetery Association for more than fifty years. How well I remember him leading the charge at the ritualistic annual clean-ups during my childhood. When I returned to Bethel in the 1970s after a dozen year break, it was if nothing had changed. He was still there doing what I remembered he always did. It was only a few years ago that he had to lay down and rest at the cemetery. I recall looking down at him and thinking it would not be long before he would be resting there permanently. But he surprised us all and lasted several more years.

Bob was greatly respected in the community and around the state. As a Gould trustee for nearly forty years, continuing a family tradition (his great-grandfather John Hastings had helped found Gould), as chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Bethel Savings Bank, and as a leading farmer in the state through the years, his progressive side was well documented.

His obstinacy was perhaps most evident when in the 1920s as a selectman he opposed plowing the roads of Bethel in the winter for the first time. He believed that it would mean people wouldn't stay home and tend to their business. In protest heresigned as a selectman.

Bob's political evolution came late. A life-long" Democrat (Jacksonian perhaps), he switched parties in the 1960s. On political issues he could be most doctrinaire. I well remember my last political discussion with him. He stated his belief that term limitations for politicians were the answer to the country's problems. I disagreed, saying I did not think they would accomplish what he had in mind and were fundamentally wrong since they denied voters choices to elect anyone they wished. He was did not think term limitations a good idea. Above all, Bob liked people. I can remember, sending Barbara Rich Adams, who knew many of the people Bob knew as a child, down to see him. What a pleasant afternoon they spent reminiscing. He loved to talk with a wide variety of people, be it at family gatherings, historical society meetings, or community events.

irritated with my notions and could not see why I

When I came to administer the historical society, in 1974. Bob was one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the organization. He donated several artifacts relating to Dr. Mason's life and times (his great-grandmother was Abigail Straw Hastings, sister to Dr. Mason's wife Agnes). From that time on, Bob would call us often at the historical society with some question, a point he thought we should know, or to chat about some item he saw in the Courier, the Society's quarterly. In his last years, he became an avid student of local history and geneal? ogy. He even recorded some of his stories for his family. One of the great treasures of the historical society are the tapes we did with Bob about his life' and reflections on Bethel's past.

Last summer I took one of Bob's oldest friends: down to see him. I was amused that during the conversation, first one, then the other would fall asleep and the other would prod the sleeping one to keep the conversation going. Neither took offense and, both saw the humor of it despite the fact that it so well illustrated that both were simply "winding

The last time I saw Bob was when the local grange called on him at home to present his 70th seal, marking 70 years of continuous membership. Bob was at his best that evening, recalling vivid memories of his years in Alder River Grange, He even pointed out that he should be considered a charter member, since in 1904 as a five year old, he was present when it was organized.

These are but a few of the multitude of memories I have of Bob. His love of life, his humor, his genuine interest in people, his neighborliness, his fascination with so many subjects from local history to new farm techniques are all part of the reason why he was so respected and will leave such a void in his community.

Few in today's society will have the experience Bob had of being born in the family homestead and dying in the same old house ninety-three years later. He loved the farm, and it is so very appropriate that his entire life span was so usefully and productively spent there.

LEN CABRAL in a workshop with CPS grade five students.

Mahoosuc Arts notes

This past week, Len Cabral presented an invigorating storytelling program for the elementary schools of SAD 44. He began on the first day with an assembly for Crescent Park followed by three workshops. His stories ranged in content from folk tales to humorous sound and motion poems. A favorite character in the folk stories, which originated from Africa, was "Ananzi," the spider. Cabral spun a wonderful tale about the creation of Ananzi: how the spider came into being. We specifically learn about why the spider has such a narrow waist and long, sinewy legs, images highlighted by Cabral's expressive facial and gestural language. In another story, we discover why the rabbit has such a short tail: in this we are introduced to an hysterical dog who tries to don horns also that she can join other horned animals taking a boat trip. Cabral adeptly brought the audience into this story by encouraging them to call out some of the lines. The children were especially excited about this kind of involvement as they were able to become a part of the action in the story.

The next day, Cabral travelled to Andover and Woodstock where he also performed in assemblies and conducted workshops. The "story game" presented to the children in most workshops was a game of "to tell the truth." Classmates had to assess which of their two selected friends were telling the true story. Many laughs arose from the activity as the kids "on stage" took liberties in hamming up their tales.

Having been enriched by Len Cabral's presence, we now have a better understanding of storytelling and an awareness of the magic and communicative value this particularly type of performing art brings to

Suds celebrates 10th

It wasn't always like this.

Once there were more mice than skiers, more litter than locals.

When David "Fuzzy" and Cheri Thurston bought the Sudbury Inn 10 years ago, the building, abandoned and vandalized, was a wreck.

But extensive renovations, a commitment to providing high quality, consistent service and dogged determination has made the Thurstons' tenure at the inn successful, they say.

The inn was built sometime in the 1870s and has changed hands eighteen times and changed names four

The Thurstons purchased the building in 1983, after it had fallen into considerable disrepair.

"The place was a dog," said General Manager Jack Cronin. "All the windows were shot out from the outside. There were motorcycles on the second floor, The Small Business Administration had it and they were trying to dump it. One night over dinner Fuzzy offered their representative $40,000 and the SBA guy was sick of coming up here from Augusta and said OK. It was not worth much more at the time than $40,000--believe me."

After basic renovations were completed, the inn opened with only two rentable rooms, a 32 seat dining room and a small bar.

Fuzzy had a day job as president of J.A. Thurston in Hale, but tended bar at the inn in the evening.
"I'd come home at night talk to my contractors and tend bar," he said. "I put in my paycheck (from Thurston's) to get the inn going. Cheri did the cooking and made beds during the day. Sometimes she'd get called out of the kitchen to register a guest. It was a real struggle getting going."

In 1984, 11 guest rooms and two suites were restored. The couple say they realized that the old inn's quaint shared bathrooms would not meet the standards of 1980s tourists, so a private bath was installed in each room.

While the Thurstons worked hard to maintain steady quality service at the inn, they also plotted expansion.

In 1988, the Suds Pub was opened. Part of the inn's old rock-walled cellar was incorporated into the basement lavern.

The inn had featured live entertainment once a month in its early years, but when Dave Nivus joined the staff in 1989, he rounded up weekly bands for Wednesday through Sunday in the Suds.

As entertainment was expanded. the Thurstons also wanted to provide customers a more consistent dining experience, Cronin said. During the early years of the Thurston's ownership, the inn's dining room was open only part of the

"When I first came on board in 1989," Cronin said. "I was told we couldn't afford a chef year round. In the winter of 1990-91 we thought we could take a chance with a good chief. We took the risk in the spring of 1991--in a very bad economic time in this region. We thought if we could increase dining by 20 or 30 percent we would succeed. We hired Chef Irv Skaff and business increased 90 percent in the first year he was here.'

The Sudbury continues to increase its offerings. In October, the inn featured a comedy night and another one is planned for Nov. 18. Cronin said he hopes to offer two comedy nights a month throughout the winter.

Although the inn's dining room and pubs are now familiar nightlife spots in the Bethel area, it's been a long struggle to achieve success, Fuzzy said.

"Now it's going great, because we hung in there," Fuzzy said. "People know we're going to be there. Some say if you make it in a business for seven years--you'll make it. We weren't smart enough to quit after five years of struggling. I was too stubborn not to make it work, We didn't hang it up when we should have and now I'm glad we didn't."

Fuzzy continues to run the J.A. Thurston mill and Cheri is secretary of the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce.

The couple has three children Matt, Parker and Marion.

ADVENTISTS BEGIN ANNUAL FUNDRAISING APPEAL

Volunteers from the Woodstock Seventh-day Adventist Church will visit both residential and business sections of the Woodstock area beginning in November for their 84th annual humanitarian appeal.

Donations benefit several programs including welfare, disaster relief, education and medical work.

Three percent of solicited money is spent for overhead and report booklets. The church uses existing channels for distribution of funds. About 14 percent of the funds raised are spent in the local community. This year's goal is $5,200.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Andrews, Bridgton were over to see Olive Davis Friday. They went to Norway on business later and did errands.

A walk-a-thon was held at the Woodstock elementary school to earn money for the school. Callers at Olive Davis's Sunday were Kris Miclon and three girls who were working on this project, Alicia, Amanda and Ashley.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Andrews spent Monday with Olive Davis. Another caller Monday night was Mrs. Charles Hurd. She was a pupil of mine when I taught at the Union School for many years.

The Historical Society reminds you that homemade articles are part of our heritage. Crafts are often sold in our area at this time of year.

Nancy Smith of Windham called on her aunt Olive Davis Wednesday Thursday was a beautiful morning.

By now the elections are over for good or ill and for that, I, for one, am grateful. It's been my observation that by and large the American people get what they deserve so it will be interesting to see just how things go. One nice thing about the elections is that in spite of polls, media and debates once a person gets in that booth the choice is his or hers and no one is standing with a gun threatening the voter. Consider-ing what happens in other countries our elections are mostly fair, peaceful and democratic and if one doesn't like the results there is always another one coming up in four years--and that is either a threat or a'

Maine hunters are reminded they must wear two articles of hunter orange clothing during the firearms

Most Common

Fungal Skin Infection

Athlete's foot is the most commonly occurring skin infection caused by a fungus. The medical term for athlete's foot is tinea pedis. This slightly contagious infection often results from contact with shed skin fragments from affected individuals. Specific fungi responsible for athlete's foot include Tricophyton rubrum, Tricophyton mentagrophytes, and Epidermophyton floccosum. These small organisms thrive in a moist environment, such as from highly sweaty teet or from failure to dry between the toes thoroughly after swimming or taking a shower. Typically, athlete's foot causes itching, burning, and scaling between the toes. Groups of blisters and peeling of the skin may occur on the bottoms of the feet. The skin between the toes becomes red and often cracks. In the more extreme cases, the toenails may become infected, overgrown, and discolored.

In order to avoid the spread of infection, the feet should be kept clean and dry. Application of antifungal powder or cream will often help eliminate the fungi causing the infection. Nonprescription medicines for the treatment of athlete's foot include undecylenic acid, tolnaftate, clotrimazole, and miconazole. More severe cases of athlete's foot may require soaking the feet in Burow's solution and taking griscofulvin, an oral antifungal medicine.

Rotary Club notes

Walt Hatch of the Bethel Conservation Commission was the guest speaker at the Tuesday, Oct. 27 Bethel Rotary Club breakfast meeting

ing.
Walt, guest of Rotarian Dennis Doyon, spoke about his campaign to gather support for an updated Comprehensive Growth Management Plan for the Town of Bethel. He showed a VCR tape called "A Good Place to Call Home," which is a joint production of the Maine Office of Comprehensive Planning and the Natural Resource Council of Maine.
He is in the process of approaching as many community groups as possible so that citizens of the Town of Bethel can let the board of selectmen know how they feel about this issue.

Walt explained to the members of Rotary that according to Maine law, the Town of Bethel does not need to update our Comprehensive Plan until the year 2003. It is agreed that development between now and then could damage the rural environment that citizens and visitors alike cherish and while economic development is good for the area it should be well planned for. Walt's presentation was very thought provoking.

Terry Elsemore presented Rotary information, which was an excerpt from the Rotarian Magazine on the Four Way Test.

Guests for the morning were Dr. Lennie Show, Joe and Norma Reidy and Honorary Rotarian George Noll.

ABILITY

This article is brought to you by Jane D. Gray, CPA

The first four letters in the word ability are A = Accountant, B=Banker, I=Insurance agent, and L = Lawyer.

There are few financial transactions of any significance that should be consummated without the professional ability of one or all of the above listed disciplines. Make it a point to consult with them on your proposed transaction when it's still in the planning stage.

Your accountant is involved every day with various transactions of the different local industries, retail businesses, and service outlets. Because accountants have constant exposure to the myriad facets of business, they become good sounding boards for your proposals. If you have a concern for the confidentiality of your information discuss it at the outset of your conference. Much of the general public is unaware of the strict ethical requirements imposed on these professionals and sometimes hesitates to involve them in preliminary planning.

The fees you pay for legal, accounting, and other professional services at the preliminary planning stage will be returned to you in better multiples than those for "after the fact" consultation. Most professionals will try to expand your own knowledge and ability as the planning progresses.

You should seek the abilities of qualified professionals in these four disciplines if you plan on investing in or selling a business, buying or selling real estate, refinancing assets, or entering into other arrangements which involve legal, accounting, tax, insurance, or financial matters. The conference could require only a brief phone call or, if your transaction has complexities, more time - and abilities - may be required. Corner of Vernon & Main Streets, Bethel • 824-2802

Bethel, Maine--more than just great skiing

Winters are crisp and snow-filled; the air is clear, the sky is blue. All around, the mountains--staggering in their quiet beauty--stand as majestic, snow-covered sentinels, insulating us from the greater bustle of the world beyond.

There are no freeways, no shopping malls, no tall buildings, nor even any stoplights.

What there is is a scattering of small towns and villages, nestled in the eastern foothills of the White Mountains, washed by the Androscoggin River, and graced by abundant winter green forests.

If you're tired of crowds and looking for a friendly, fun break from the daily grind, you might consider visiting us this winter. Whether for skiing, snowmobiling, or just enjoying the quiet beauty, we welcome you.

There is great skiing, of course, but there's much more.

Mostly the Bethel area's winter visitors come for the topnotch skiing and other winter sports, but off the slopes and trails the curious will find a vital and diverse community.

In fact, many visitors find that this part of western Maine has just the sort of balanced, healthful outdoor lifestyle they've dreamed about.

For many, that first visit is the beginning of a lifelong love affair.

I think winter is a season of winter it's a low growl. rest, a season of reflection. Country living finds its peak in the winter time, when the fields are wrapped in snow. The summer's rush is over, the meadows are bedded down for winter sleep and around the house purple shadows creep. Shawnee Peak shines after dark

When Shawnee Peak in nearby Bridgton installed high lumination lights to the summit of their mountain, they became New England's largest night skiing facility and added a whole new dimension to skiing.

"Shawnee Peak brought big mountain night skiing to northern New England," said Amy Brown, marketing director. In the past night skiing has been limited to smaller mountains, and geared to the beginner or real intermediate skier. Shawnee Peak now offers night skiing for all abilities, beginner through expert, on 17 of the mountain's 30 trails, offering skiers 1,300 vertical feet of skiing, both day and night.

Open 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m., seven days a week, and conveniently located just 18 miles from North Conway, N.H. and 45 miles from Portland, Maine, Shawnee Peak offers skiers an opportunity to ski after work--the perfect cabin fever reliever.

Shawnee Peak's extended skiing hours have also allowed them to create unique programs, such as their popular night recreational racing series and

Gould offers hands-on education

The creative tension between instruction in the traditional academic disciplines and learning through hands-on experience is alive and well in Bethel, Maine, especially after the snow begins to frost the Mahoosuc Mountains in late

Through ten years at Gould Academy's helm, Headmaster Bill Clough, with his wife Ki, have exploited this tension to forge an overall program grounded in preparation for college study, but supplemented with lessons from places like the ski patrol room at Sunday River, the snowy woods of the White Mountain National Forest, and the cross-country ski trails at the school and local ski touring centers.

Success of an educational philosophy is hard to quantify, but programs like the student ski patrol, which requires a 70-hour Winter Emergency Care course before ski season, help substantiate it. Under the direction of Associate Headmaster Dr. Harry "Dutch" Dresser, students assist the Sunday River Ski Patrol in all aspects of patrolling each day after school. Dresser's notions of teaching--exemplified by the successful ski patrol and a popular Gould math department course he teaches in celestial parallel navigation--run so many real problems to be ucation at the high school level classroom."

"It is unreasonable for any than you can find integrals school to expect better work from students who are bored, confused, or passive," says Clough. "Only those who are secure, fully supported, and believe in their school will put out their best effort." He goes on to say that the outcome of a system which has a clear sense of the interplay between attitude and effort is graduates with higher stakes in their own educations.

Clough resists measuring success by the college acceptance list, although Gould graduates in the last five years have attended schools like Johns Hopkins, Dartmouth, Harvard, Cornell, M.I.T., Middlebury, Smith, Bates, Colby, Duke, and a long list of excellent small colleges and large universities throughout the United States. Clough enjoys hearing of graduates being chosen for collegiate honors, (like Jay Davis '86 as Dartmouth Commencement Orator and Becca Garnett '88 as class speaker at Huxley College of Environmental Studies.

view on education. "A school which merely imparts knowledge or facilitates college acceptance has no real reason for existence unless it does these things in an atmosphere which transforms knowledge into discovery and college acceptance into opportunity," he says.

Although this atmosphere is hard to quantify, according to Clough its two key components are the school's faculty and location. "Good schools are places where good teachers collect-teachers who may consciously or unconsciously redirect hundreds of lives and who develop extended families of students who may or may not realize how their lives have been changed for the better."

Gould's location becomes a more dear commodity with each surge in population and highway growth in southern New England, and as Western Maine has maintained good ski conditions during lean snow years over most of the rest of the Northeast. Gould sits in the middle of Bethel's village and minutes from the Appalachian Trail, Sunday River Ski Resort, and the White ten years, it is apparent that Mountain National Forest. As Bethel and Sunday River Ski Resort are discovered by more and more summer and winter could distinguish between the recreationists, Gould has the potential for having the type of reputation it would likely have were it on the beaten path. "But skiing, either." then," Clough laughs, "we wouldn't be Gould Academy."

In talking to people associated with Gould, there is a sense that Gould could grow in size as the reputation of the school spreads, although Gould's enrollment figures (196, including 30 day students) are among the strongest in Maine. The school's impressive physical plant accommodated a student body of 351 in 1964, when Gould served the dual role of local public school and private boarding school, which it continued until 1967, after which the boarding rather than the day experience predom-

In keeping its current size, Gould maintains the sense of community that the Cloughs value in small boarding schools. The size also enables execution of Clough's commitment to "keeping things new" in the educational process, especially in the annual Four Points Program he began nearly ten years ago. In 1992 this meant sending the entire freshman class to Hungary while the sophomores built affordable housing for Habitat for Humanity, the juniors spent a week with backpacks and snowshoes, and the seniors worked with the Bethel-based National Training Laboratories.

As their tenure at Gould nears Gould Academy is the right place for Bill and Ki Clough. "We wanted to be among adults who meat and the shell of the process of education," says Clough. "And we don't mind the great

Winter biathlon: a two-way challenge

By SCOTT JEROME

Cross-country ski racing requires maximum physical exertion. Rifle shooting requires total calmness. The combination of these two events may seem illogical and impractical, but they have been successfully combined in a sport called winter biathlon.

Winter biathlon made its Olympic debut into 1960 Winter Games, while 1992 witnessed the first medal biathlon competition for women. Biathlon originated during World War II when skis allowed soldiers in northern Europe to navigate through snowy border zones. The Cold War (no pun intended) also brought a need for skiing patrols along the Finnish, Norwegian and Soviet borders.

But Biathlon, of some form, does date back even further. Scandinavian nomads have long used skis as a means of transportation while hunting and gathering food. These people used spears and arrows instead of gunpowder, but the combination of the two very different skills was strikingly similar to the modern sport.

Today, biathlon is for recreation not survival. In a biathlon race competitors must ski over a prescribed course stopping at regular intervals to shoot targets. Races range from 7.5 kilometers to 20 kilometers. Targets are shot at with a .22 caliber rifle from a distance of 50 meters. The rifle is worn on the racer's back with a harness throughout the race.

Biathlon may seem strange to many people, but not in Bethel. Bethel's Gould Academy sponsors one of the few high school biathlon programs in the country. Gould's biathlon coach Kirk Siegel has competed for over a dozen years and held a spot on the U.S. National Team from 1981-1984.

One of Gould's graduates now is a member of the U.S. National Development Team. Ben Michaud of Bethel, former Junior National champion, attends college at Northern Michigan University while living and training at the Olympic Training Center in Marquette, Mich. Michaud is currently ranked 23rd in the country and is expected to be a strong contender for the 1994 Winter Olympic Team.

National championships here

Western Maine witnessed a flurry of biathlon activity in January of 1991. The National Championships that were to be held in Lake Placid, N.Y. were forced to find another location due to a rainy washout of the course. Chummy Broomhall of Black Mountain in Rumford, Gould Academy and numerous volunteers came to the rescue. Broomhall and his crew constructed a shooting range at the base of the ski jumps and groomed the trails to perfection. Gould Academy provided office space for race logistics and housing was provided by local townspeople. Western Maine rescued what could have been a championship washout.

Biathlon may seem inaccessible to many, but there are ways to give it a shot without having to buy a rifle.

For example, in February L.L. Bean will host a biathlon clinic and fun race in conjunction with Gould Academy. The events are a part of the L.L. Bean's Ski Festival Weekend. The clinic will be held on Saturday, Feb. 7 while the three kilometers fun race will be held Sunday, Feb. 8. Contact L.L. Bean for registration or Kirk Siegel for questions, 824-2196.

Learning the business of skiing

Ten years ago the University of Maine at Farmington became one of the few colleges in the United States to offer a ski industries curriculum. Although the Industry is comparatively small, the program is gaining recognition across the country.

In the past 10 years, UMF has graduated over 50 degree students with certificates in ski industries. Graduates have found employment as coaches at some of the best race academies in the US, others are teaching at Winter Park, Colorado, Alta, Utah and Copper Mountain, Colorado. While the business majors are spread out from Kassbohrer Piston Bullies to Marker USA.

Tom Reynolds, better known as "Coach," the director of the Ski Industries Program, receives calls from all over the world looking for qualified people to fill jobs. According to Reynolds he can't fill these jobs fast enough.

The program consists of three modules: ski business, ski coaching-professional ski teacher, and disabilities skiing specialist. Each of the three modules combines core courses, with a practicum and an internship. Practicums are introductorylevel learning experiences, while internships are more in-depth learning and work experiences in career settings.

The program is staffed by Tom Reynolds, Leigh Breidenbach and Doc DesRoches. Reynolds is a professor of physical education, one of only a handful of USSCA Level IV certified coaches, full certified ski teacher with PSIA-E, and serves as a lecturer for PSIA and USSCA.

Breidenbach, a 1993 graduate of UMF and the Ski Industries Program, serves as a lecturer and resource person in the business and adaptive skiing modules. She is currently a Level II USSCA certified coach and full certified ski teacher with PSIA. Along with her duties at UMF, Breidenbach is director of the Women's Seasonal Ski Program at Sunday River in Bethel, essentials for cold weather trekkers. Snowshoes are normally required until the treeline is reached.

At the top of the alpine tundra, well into April. most of the snow is blown off and the hike becomes easier.

Many winter mountain hikers also like to take along a small pair of instep clamp-ons in case they encounter icy conditions on the summit.

One of the easiest abovetreeline day trips is Caribou Mountain in the White Mountain National Forest. Trail information is available at the Evans Notch Rangers District Office on Bridge Street in Bethel.

Grafton Notch State Park is an ice-climbers paradise. The park is located about 15 miles north of Bethel on Route 26 in Grafton.

The park features many frozen slides and waterfalls simulating climbing conditions normally found in much higher mountains.

The slides on the east side of Old Speck provide good beginners pitch climbs.

There is also an excellent small top-roping area on Old Speck called the amphitheater, which has beginners to expert climbs.

There are many other ice falls in Grafton Notch visible from Route 26. Information about climbing in Grafton Notch can be obtained from the Mahoosuc Guide Service at 824-2073.

Just in case ...

The Bethel Area Health Center is located halfway between Mt. Abram and Sunday River Ski Resort on Railroad Street in Bethel.

The Health Center employs a physical therapist. The physical therapist is available two days a week to assess injuries and provide treatment plans for rehabilitation.

One of the possibilities of winter sports is injuries. The Health Center provides fitness assessments and orientations to the center's exercise program. Many people want alternatives to exercising outdoors in the winter and prefer the opportunity to exercise inside on the center's Nordic track or exercise bicycle. The exercise room also has a Universal gym and a selection of free weights.

The Health Center is equipped and staffed to provide care for most acute medical needs. There is a full staff of nurses, family doctors and a physician assistant, and a provider is on call 24 hours every day. The radiological and laboratory services offer state of the art diagnostic testing.

The Health Center extends its hours from the end of December through April to accommodate emergencies and acute illnesses. Many visitors who travel to Maine for a winter vacation end up with a sick child in need of care; it is very helpful to have access to health care providers in this situation. From December through April the Center is open on weekends as well as on regular weekday hours.

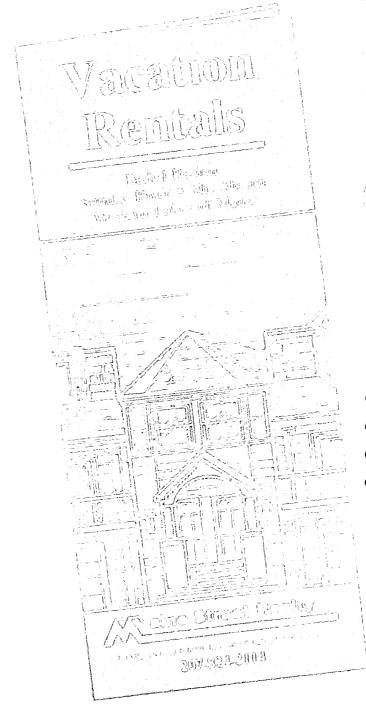

The Human Services Department at the Health Center offers mental health, substance abuse and domestic violence counseling for those in need. The center's newest program is the Safer Families Program (824-3600) which is a domestic violence project that offers counseling, advocacy and education services in western Oxford County.

The Health Center hopes that everyone who visits picturesque western Maine this winter will enjoy it safely and in good health.
